Now, more than ever, we all realize the importance of coming together and supporting one another as our nations, our communities, and our neighborhoods work as one to combat the spread of COVID-19. At Cokesbury we are very much doing the same.

As we previously shared, all of our staff members are working remotely and our first priority is to them, their families, and to all of the churches and communities we serve. We are glad to share that Cokebsury.com and the Cokesbury Customer Care team remain available and that we are continuing to provide resources and materials.

We are following guidance from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention as well as national and local governments to take extra precautions. We are continuing to closely monitor this global health crisis and will provide relevant updates as they relate to Cokesbury through our website.

This is our time. It is a time for our inner angels to emerge and for each of us to become our best selves.

Sincerely,

The Cokesbury Team
